Write your answer in 140–190 words in an appropriate style on the separate answer sheet.

You have received this email from your English-speaking friend, Jo.

Hi!

I have to do my homework every day as soon as I get home. I want to do things like see my friends and relax straight after school – then do my homework later. But my parents don't let me do anything else until I've finished my homework. How can I persuade my parents to change their minds?

Hope you can help!

Hi Jo!

It was great to hear from you. I'm so sorry you're having such a hard time with your homework! I also think it is important to have time to relax after school. In my opinion, you should talk to your parents and explain exactly how you feel.

Firstly, you could tell them that spending time with your friends helps you relax after a long day at school. Not only would this help you feel better, but it would also make you more motivated to do your homework later.

However, your parents are probably discussing about your studies. Why don't you suggest making a plan together? For example, you could spend an hour relaxing after school and then do your homework before dinner. This way, they would see that you can be responsible.

Finally, you could try this plan for a week. If you finish your homework on time, your parents might agree to let you continue.

I hope my advice helps! Let me know how it goes.

See you soon,

Nicolás
